Edison Manager
Speaker at Valley
Chambers Meet

The associated chambers of commerce of the San Gabriel valley held its first meeting at La Verne Tuesday evening, the 6:30 banquet being served in the First Methodist church.
In the absence of the president in the east, Mr. Will G. Fields, the vice president, Mr. "Bob" Williams, presided.

The Clarion Four of La Verne college gave the special musical numbers on the program. Several ten-minute amendment talks were made, the speakers being Henry L. Martin, who discussed amendments 4 and 8; C. W. Cleary on No. 28, and H.
J. Evans on No. 20. Supervisor
Cogswell talked on roads, and J. W.
Reagan on flood control.

The address of the evening was made by R. H. Ballard, vice president and general manager of the Southern California Edison company.
Mr. Ballard spoke of the electrical achievements of California, opening his speech with the words: "California stands higher in its electrical achievements and developments than any other place in the world."

Continuing, Mr. Ballard said, in part: "Fostered by a wonderful, climate, fertile soil and ideal living conditions, electricity, so far as I have been able to observe, renders greater service to each individual resident of the San Gabriel valley than any other place in California."

"Housewarming"
at Boys' School
Is Well Attended

Friday, October 8th, was truly a gay day at California Preparatory School for Boys. An informal reception, in the nature of a "housewarming," to which the general public was invited, occupied the program from two to five in the afternoon, and was attended by hundreds of the patrons and friends of the school from various cities and towns of Southern California, with a most gratifying representation of leading citizens from Covina and other sections of San Gabriel valley.

The spacious new concrete buildings were gorgeously decorated with shrubs, palms, potted plants and cut flowers, many of which were complimentary offerings from citizens of Covina. The general plan, and much of the materials of the decorations, was the work of C. P. Spear of Bal-win Park, and elicited most favorable comment from the host of visitors.

The guests were received in the general reception room of the main building by Mr. and Mrs. Henry, assisted by Superintendent and Mrs.
C. M. Ward. After introductions and felicitations the guests were passed on in groups to committees of students who conducted them through the buildings, where they were met by the instructors and other officials of the school who explained to them the workings of their various departments.

In the evening an informal dance was conducted by the students of the school, under the supervision of school officers, the young ladies of Covina and other valley towns, including those of the Girls' Collegiate school at Glendora, being the specially invited guests, with their chaperones. The new gymnasium, specially decorated for the occasion,
was the scene of this festivity.
Delicious light refreshments were served throughout the afternoon and evening.

Funeral Held for George N. Atwood

The funeral of George N. Atwood, which occurred at his residence, 275
Glassell avenue, Orange, Monday, October 11th, was largely attended by old friends and business associates from Covina. Deceased was 76 years old.

Mr. Atwood came to California in 1898 from Longmont, Colo., locating in Covina and engaging in the citrus industry. He purchased the ranch on West San Bernardino road now owned by Frank K. Hoover, and served as manager of the Covina
Citrus association for ten years.
Moving to Orange in 1912, Mr. Atwood continued the culture of oranges and was manager of the Santiago Citrus association for several years.

Funeral services were held at the Episcopal church in Orange, Reverend Clarkson officiating. The commitment service at Evergreen cemtery in Los Angeles was given by the Masonic lodge of Santa Ana, following which the remains were cremated.

Mr. Atwood was active in church circles, having been vestryman in both the Episcopal churches of Covina and Orange. He ranked high in Masonic orders, having been a Knight Templar, and was prominent in civic affairs. He is survived by his widow and three children, George Atwood, Percy Atwood, and Mrs. Alice Aschenbrenner of Berkeley.

Those attending from Covina were Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Collins, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Potter, Mr. and Mrs. William Griswold, Mr. and Mrs. J. J.
Aschenbrenner, Mr. and Mrs. William Crook, Mrs. Alice Clapp, Mrs.
H. Faulder, Mrs. C. T. Booth, Mrs.
A. E. Evans, Mrs. J. O. Houser, and Mrs. E. W. Groom.

MISSIONARY DINNER

The women's missionary society of the Christian church held a 6:30 dinner last Friday evening, preceding a program given by the men members, Mr. Walter Stairs presiding. Musical numbers were given by Grant Chapman, in violin solos, and Mrs. T. E.
Foster, vocal solos, and an address by Mrs. John Thompson, president of the Southern California societies.

BUILDS APARTMENT

Judson C. Rives, owner of a large ranch on Virginia street, has just completed a large apartment house at Pico and Westchester Place, said to represent an investment of 750,- 000. It is seven-story and contains eighty-seven apartments.

HIGH SCHOOL WILL HOLD
EVENING SESSION OF CLASSES

October 19th the Covina union high school will hold an evening session of school classes for the purpose of furnishing the patrons an opportunity for seeing the work done.
This plan was carried out last year and a great deal of interest shown.
The public is again invited to come in and see the school as it works.
Classes will begin at 7 o'clock p.m.
and three regular periods will be held.

The session is held under the auspices of the Parent-Teacher association and will take the place of its October meeting.

TOUCHDOWNS

Every inhabitant of this community is proud of the past achievements of our high school football team. All are hoping they will repeat under the wise and canny management of Coach Newman.

However, it's touchdowns—not good wishes—that win football games, and every individual interested in our team's success can help our boys put the ball across the line and put strength in the toe that punts the ball across the bar.

Many a football game has been won through the stimulant of encouragement and enthusiasm on the part of the team's supporters—many lost through lack of same at a critical period of the game.

So, folks, let's all go to Monrovia today, and when we get there, let's make it known to the multitude that we're there to see our team win. We want that first game, don't we! Well, then

TEN YEARS AGO

The seventh California infantry will arrive in Los Angeles tomorrow and be mustered out at Exposition park during the next three weeks. Each man to be paid in full before receiving his discharge.

Grant interest centers in the $15,000,000 good road bonds issue to be voted on November 1st at the state election.

Despite the severe and sudden storm of last Friday morning, the fall musicale and rally of the local white ribbons at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Matthews was well attended. Those giving musical numbers were Mrs. Grant Chapman, Miss Leta Nash, Mrs. W. W. Cathorwood, Mrs. Fred Kaiser, Miss Crete King, and Mrs. John Brunjes of Glendora, with Mrs. Henry Damerel as accompanist.

Thursday evening a reception was held in the parlors of the Baptist church for all the teachers in this district.

Dr. and Mrs. O. P. Shoemaker left Covina last Saturday for an extended eastern trip. They were accompanied by Mrs. John Gates.

Miss Doll Harnish, who has been the guest of honor at a large number of social affairs since the announcement of her engagement to Mr. Paul Custer, was entertained last Saturday afternoon by Mrs. Wallace Reed and Miss Edith Waterhouse of Pasadena.

Mrs. William S. Hook gave a luncheon Tuesday at her beautiful home near Covina for Mrs. John V. Posey (formerly Miss Belle Coulter).

The Men's league of the Presbyterian church were entertained at the home of Messrs. Leroy and Ed Blanchard last Friday evening. Prof. V. R. Ross was formerly elected president.

Dr. J. K. Abbott, a Covina physician, had his car stolen in Pomona Wednesday evening. The thieves had broken the lock on a Buick in an attempt to get away with it.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

C. H. King, physician and surgeon, has moved his office to the Reed block, where he may be found.

At the meeting of the directors of the Covina Irrigating company on October 2nd, the following resolution was adopted: That a committee of three be appointed to investigate the proposition of bettering the condition of main ditch. First, the probable cost; second, the best means to be used; third, the probable amount that may be saved in water and general expense of maintaining same.

Mr. Charles Damerel who, while in Los Angeles about two weeks ago fell and broke his knee cap and a small bone in his wrist, has sufficiently recovered to be able to return home.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Kellar will move next week into the residence recently vacated by Mrs. Belle Harris.

The telephones of Drs. Reed and Jennings have been connected with the suburban lines so that ranchers having phones can call the doctors direct any hour, day or night.

A delightful surprise was given Mrs. I. M. Bartley at her home on Grand avenue last Thursday, the occasion being her 30th birthday. Early in the morning the friends began to arrive with well-filled baskets as well as a bundle of carpet rags, and all enjoyed a good old fashioned sewing bee.

Mr. and Mrs. Jonas Baughman have moved into their new home one-half mile south of the Irwindale post-office.

This evening at 7:14 o'clock, a theater train leaves Azusa for Los Angeles, returning at midnight. Arrangements have been made for a bus to leave Hotel Vendome at 6:20 to connect with this train. Fare, round trip, including bus, $1.00 from Covina.

W. G. Hall of Glendora advertises ten-acre tracts of land, with water, for $1500 each, on easy terms.

MRS. TYLER HOME FROM TRIP LASTING FOUR MONTHS

Mrs. J. A. Tyler returned Sunday of last week from a four months' visit in the east. She left Covina, accompanied by Mr. Tyler. They made the trip by rail to Seattle, going from there to Skagway, Alaska. They visited all the larger cities and points of interest, including Lake Bennett. One of the things that interested them most was daylight twenty-four hour a day. Quite a thrill was given by shopping at 2:30 in the morning and by daylight.

They made the trip across the Canadian Rockies, stopping in Chicago, then going to New York, where they visited relatives. Mr. Tyler returned home in August.

Mr. and Mrs. William Viney will entertain the members of the Newcomers' club at their home on Citrus avenue next Monday evening.

State Is Protector of Canyon Water Rights

All Rights to Use of Water in California Are Issued by the State and by No Other Agency — Misrepresentation of Facts Enters Into Campaign to Elect 1st District Supervisor

By FRED T. BEATY

In the past several months a great deal of "political medicine" has been brewed by the campaign committee working in behalf of Supervisor Cogswell, in an attempt to show that if the supervisor is defeated it will result in placing water rights in the San Gabriel canyon in danger.

All citizens should realize that the use of all surface water in California is a public use, subject to regulation and control by the state. The board of supervisors, or any member of it, is as powerless to change existing conditions relating to the use of water as are private individuals. There is no action by the board that could be taken to either defend existing rights or to endanger them. They have no power whatever concerning water.

Before any unappropriated flowing water on public lands can be utilized, the state must issue permits in the form of priority rights. The use of such water, which must be a public use, is at all times subject to control and regulation by the state. Only the right to use a certain amount of water under specified conditions is accorded to individuals and groups of individuals, such as irrigating companies, private domestic water companies, irrigation districts and municipal water companies. These rights, or priorities, are revocable under certain conditions, but are virtually rights in perpetuity, so long as the water is used for beneficial purposes for which the priorities were issued. The rights are so secured under these circumstances that water companies possessing these priorities are in the habit of speaking of their share of water as an outright ownership. So long as the water is used to a reasonable extent according to the terms of the priorities it does actually constitute an ownership of the use of the water.

No officials other than officials of the State Division of Water Rights have power to give priority to use, divert, or in any way to allocate any water, excepting that decisions of the State Division of Water Rights may be taken into a regularly constituted court, where the question of rights to the water will be decided through the ordinary methods of court procedure.

This applies to all water on public lands flowing through or originating within the state. The State Division of Water Rights acts merely as an agent of the state, subject to court review. The federal government possesses no rights to or power over water within the state, excepting such rights as pertain to the protection of the national domain, as set forth in the National Debris Act and in other federal law designed similarly to protect national forests and forest reserves. The state is virtually supreme as to the use of water within its jurisdiction.

NEW ANGLE RISES

Since the inception of flood control projects in the state, and particularly in Los Angeles county, a new problem, which is in fact an old problem presented in a new guise, has arisen—that of the possible existence of surplus water brought about through the building of flood control dams in the canyons, and which prevent flood water from wasting into the ocean. These are strictly retardation dams, and not storage dams, excepting that, as in the case of the Los Angeles county flood control district, certain agreements have been entered into with individuals and groups of individuals, such as communities, for the joint use of the dams for a restricted amount of storage, but subject to the issuance of water priorities by the state. The dams as planned and built are not designed for the permanent holding of water, but are designed to hold the peak flow of storms, thereafter to release the water at a much lessened velocity than would be the case of an uninterrupted flow, making it possible for a greater amount of percolation, in fact, with the end in view of causing all the flow to be absorbed in the ground, therefore preventing any waste into the ocean. Through this method the violent flow in washes and rivers is prevented, thus preventing damage to property abutting on streams, and by percolation, adding materially to the underground supply utilized by ranchers and domestic companies pumping the underground supply to the surface. The joint use of dams for flood control and for storage has not yet been decided upon, and may or may not be determined to be either practical or legal. The best flood control authorities declare that flood control and surface conservation of water are not reconcilable, in that flood control dams must be emptied as rapidly as is expedient, in order to serve efficiently as temporary catch-basins, as storms recur.

SURPLUS NOT DEFINED

Because of the fact that flood control-dams are temporary retardation dams, and not storage dams, it is maintained that there is no such commodity existent as that which is termed "surplus water," or storm water that has been checked and confined for an indeterminate period. Application for rights of appropriation of the use of such "surplus water" is therefore at this time held in abeyance, and the issuance of priorities on such a basis is problematic. The board of supervisors of Los Angeles county has ruled in advance of any court decision that the board has the power to grant the partial use of a flood control reservoir for the purpose of storing water, thereafter to be diverted as used as a municipal water supply, but subject, first, to the granting of a priority on this "surplus water" by the state to the municipality. The outstanding illustration of this is found in the filings by the city of Pasadena and other municipalities upon a possible surplus of water in the San Gabriel canyon, and the proposal to store such water to the extent of 65,000 acre feet behind the San Gabriel canyon flood control dam. Water thus stored is contended to be the same water that if not stored would by natural process be wasted into the ocean, and therefore is not possessed by priority by any individual or group of individuals.

In contradistinction to this contention is the contention of the water users possessing appropriations and priorities in the San Gabriel river water, such rights being of long standing. It is declared that the water in the river has already been completely appropriated, covering the full flow of the stream at all times, and that waste water, or storm water, is contained within the original priorities, and should all be allowed to proceed slowly down stream after leaving the flood control dams, bringing about a virtually complete percolation and absorption, available thereafter for use by pumping within the immediate area of the river cone and coastal plane from the natural underground storage reservoirs.

It is contended, moreover, in addition to the claim that all water supplied by the river is now and has been for some time under appropriation, that the fact has always been demonstrable that the territory supplied with water by these appropriations has never been supplied to the fullest extent—that a vast amount of acreage within the immediate watershed has never been irrigated, or not sufficiently irrigated, because of a lack of water from the river, both in surface supply and underground storage supply. Any water, therefore, which may be conserved behind flood control retardation dams is declared to be a part of the water already in use and secured by vested rights. If, in the opinion of the state, and state courts, appropriated water is not utilized by those individuals and groups of individuals holding these priorities, it may be declared to be water open to appropriation. But water users, especially in the San Gabriel coastal plane, aver that they stand in need of this water, and have at all times in the past stood in need of it in the event it should be conserved.

LEGALITY QUESTIONED

Aside from the question of the existence or non-existence of surplus water or storm water, there is the question of the legality of the use of a flood control dam as a surface water conservation dam. The act under which the Los Angeles county flood control district is formed, and which is the basis for the issuance of bonds to build flood control dams and other projects, is made to apply to flood control as the major design and aim of the district, and touches upon the question of conservation only as it relates to underground storage. Upon this point there always has been a great popular misapprehension based on misinformation and to some extent, misrepresentation. If it lies within the power, and if it is the duty of the flood control district to empty flood control reservoirs following storms, in order that these same dams may be in a receptive condition for expected storms, it therefore follows that the dams cannot at the same time be utilized as storage-reservoirs where a supply may be measured and counted upon for irrigation or for domestic purposes. This is true with the possible exception of a time element, such as the holding of a supply behind the dams at a season of the year when it is reasonably certain no further storms of any considerable magnitude may be expected. This possible provision, however, makes the supply so uncertain it is not conceivable as a basis upon which water users can depend with any surety. Lack of reasonable surety in water supply destroys its value, as it must be reasonably continuous and perpetual in supply; else its value is negligible in the support of industry and human life.

SUPERVISORS WITHOUT POWER

In summarizing water conditions, water rights and the use and proprietorship of water in California, it should then be borne in mind that while any group or community or political subdivision may propose certain usages, diversions and appropriations of water, the actual determination can never be made by any, excepting the state of California through the State Division of Water Rights, or by judicial decision. The board of supervisors, acting either for the county or for the flood control district, has no power to allocate or to make any disposition whatever of any water in the state. It will therefore be seen that Supervisor Cogswell's re-election, or the election of any person, has no bearing on the water rights of any individual or group of individuals. His sympathies with or against any group or any individual will have no weight, his statements and the statements of his supporters to the contrary.

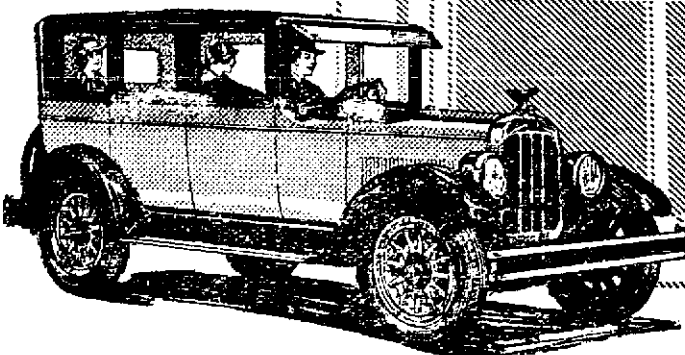

SOLUTION POSSIBLE

It is reasonable to assume that in the progress of the flood control program of Los Angeles county, a system will be legally evolved which will make possible the surface conservation of water behind flood control dams, and the use of such water for domestic or for irrigation purposes. But this, at this time, is an assumption only.

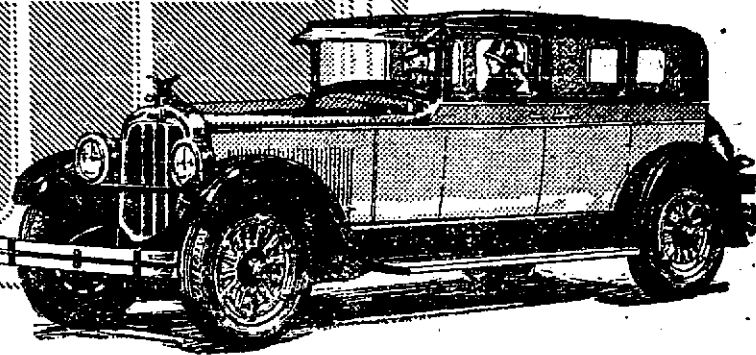

The proper attitude of the citizen and property-owner is to place the authority correctly. The flood control district officials, who in the case of the Los Angeles county flood control district are the members of the board of supervisors, are the authorities having complete jurisdiction over the building, maintenance and operation of the flood control projects, subject to certain regulations of the federal government when these projects are within the confines of the national domain. The authority over the use and disposal of water is vested in the state and the state courts.
